

$1,400 OR I'LL SHOOT EVERYBODY, HE CRIED

Released from Asylum, Bowers Scared Lawyers' Title Company Folk.

Frederick A. Bowers, at one time well known in Brooklyn and for the past six years, until two weeks ago, confined in an asylum at Westport, Conn., was released from the Adams Street Police Court today, and probably may be returned to the asylum.

Bowers, who is forty-five years old, has been staying at the Grand Union Hotel for several days. He owns property in Brooklyn and an estate in Waterbury, Conn., valued at $5,000. When he came to the city, Edison H. Lockwood, of Waterbury, a trustee of the estate, informed John P. Lammendin, at attorney of Manhattan, that Bowers was probably endeavoring to raise money on his estate as he wanted to go to Cuba and join the revolutionists. Lammendin notified the several trust companies in the city of the facts.

For the second time within a week Bowers called at the office of the Lawyers' Title Guaranty & Trust Company in Brooklyn, yesterday. He had tried to raise $1,400 and had been told off by the company without being paid. When informed yesterday that the loan could not be arranged, Bowers said:

"I want $1,400 and I want it right now. If I don't get it, I will blow the head off everybody here."

He was detained until a detective arrived and then locked up on a technical charge of vagrancy. He had no weapon, but carried a cane decorated with pictures of rifles, revolvers and knives and bearing several notches.

CHANGES IN PUBLIC LECTURE COURSE

Dr. James Walter Crook, of Amherst, Will Talk About Trusts This Evening.

"Trusts and the Public Welfare" will be the subject of a free public address to be delivered this evening under the auspices of the Board of Education at Public School No. 30, at No. 234 East Eighty-fifth street, by Dr. James Walter Crook of Amherst College. Dr. Crook will explain the origin of the trusts and particularly what their attitude should be toward them. Shall they be destroyed? Shall they be left alone? Shall they be subjected to foreign competition or shall they be regulated or controlled? If controlled, shall such control be exercised by the State or nation?

Two changes have been made in the lectures already announced for the evening of Richmond for this evening. At Public School No. 25, Harbortown Avenue, Port Richmond, James W. Crook will lecture on "Eugene Field" in place of the lecture on "Evangelism" by Dr. William Miller, and at Public School No. 14, Broad and Brook streets, Brooklyn, S. W. Lyons will give a talk on "Rome and Her Diocesan Value" as a substitute for the lecture by Albert L. Merson on "Distinguished Names in Roman History."

At the High School of Commerce, Sixty-sixth street, west of Broadway, to-morrow evening, Leslie Willie Lammendin will continue his lectures on "Social Forces in the Victorian Novel" with a lecture on "Charles Kingsley and the Social Awakening of the Church," and at St. Bartholomew's Hall, No. 236 East Forty-second street, Theodore L. Jones will speak on "Magnum and the Magnetic Telephone," the fourth lecture in his course on "Telephone Engineering."
